

GYS Vision

The design brief called for a commercial development comprising of three high-rise corporate office towers in one of the prime suburbs of New Delhi Gurgaon, being the hub of emergent urbanism in India influences the design intervention, where built form moves away from the typical office typology, aiming to provide an alternative with interweaving open social spaces, and closed workspaces. The scheme was developed as a direct response to reinterpret the design of a typical Indian office by stacking and rotating a 3 storey low-rise formless to create new ground to promote a strong inside-outside connect, even at elevated levels.

Continue to Full Article on ArchiBazaar